DETAILED ACTION

The examiner acknowledges the receipt and entry of the applicant's amendment.

Claim Objections

1. Claims 1-2, 4-5, 7-10 and 12-13 are objected to because of the following informalities: It is unclear that this application teaches where "each word of said plurality being sequentially displayed" (from amended Claim 1). There is no mention of each word displayed in the specification, only a sequential display of messages and phrases (e.g. page 5, lines 11-18 of the Specification). Only in Figures 2A-2C is "word" mentioned. In Figures 2B and 2C "word" appears to point to phrases. Although insufficient to support a 112 rejection, appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
2. Claims 1-2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Baals, U.S. Patent No. 5,392,337. Referring to claim 1, Baals discloses a recording medium with computer-readable and executable software programs (col. 2, lines 35-49 and col. 3, lines 27-28) that performs processing (col. 2, line 36) by taking as commands an output from a controller which has a variable pressure sensing means (col. 3, lines 61-63) where software programs display messages on a screen in accordance with the output of the controller (col. 1, lines 52-53), where each message comprises a pre-defined sentence having a plurality of words (Figure 3, 210), each word sequentially displayed on a screen in a pre-defined order (i.e., left to right) and where messages are displayed in accordance with the rate that corresponds to the magnitude of an output value of the controller (col. 3, lines 56-64). Baals does not disclose where the messages are displayed on a computer screen. Baals does disclose that “the command-operated terminal could be utilized in a computer...” (Baals, col. 3, lines 27-28). At the time the invention was made it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to display the messages on a computer screen as opposed to a telephone terminal. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do this because peripheral devices, such as displays, are frequently interchangeable in data communications systems.

Referring to claim 2, Baals discloses where words are displayed on a screen in pre-defined order in accordance with the rate of change per unit time of a variable output value of the controller (col. 3, lines 48-53).

3. Claims 4-5, 7-10 and 11-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Baals, in view of Armstrong, U.S. Patent No. 5,999,084. Referring to claim 4, Baals further discloses detecting an operation pressure of a user on a controller (col. 3, line 61), displaying messages on the screen based on the selection and displaying the messages all at once (col. 1, lines 52-53).

Referring to claim 5, the remarks presented above with respect to claim 2 apply equally to this claim.

Referring to claim 7, Baals does not disclose using a correspondence table to determine which words are to be displayed. At the time the invention was made it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to utilize a correspondence table to determine the output value. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do this because data tables (e.g. databases) are frequently used for storing, retrieving and processing data.

Referring to claim 8, Baals discloses where the message rate of change is determined from a previous pressure sensing value (col. 3, lines 55-64) and from a current pressure sensing value (col. 4, lines 1-2—i.e. pressing “done”).

Referring to claim 9, the remarks presented above with respect to claim 4 apply equally to this claim.

Referring to claim 10, the remarks presented above with respect to claim 5 apply equally to this claim.

Referring to claim 12, the remarks presented above with respect to claim 7 apply equally to this claim.

Referring to claim 13, the remarks presented above with respect to claim 8 apply equally to this claim.

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant’s response with respect to the objection to the abstract has been fully considered and is persuasive. The objection to the abstract has been withdrawn.

2. Applicant's arguments filed July 11, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Referring to the rejections to claims 1 and 2, the applicant argues that Baals fails to teach the sequential display of certain words from a complete sentence in accordance with a variable-output pressure sensing means. The examiner points to the reasons as set forth in rejections above.

Regarding the 103 rejections to the remaining claims, the examiner points to the reasons as set forth in rejections above.

The rejections to these claims stand.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
